FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Okinawa Today

BY MAJ. GEN. DAVID A. D. OGDEN, USA

A COMPARATIVELY small island in the East China Sea is today the key to the free world's defense plans in the Far East.

United States presence on Okinawa, situated midway between Japan and the Philippines and only 350 miles from the shores of Communist China, could very well mean the difference between victory and defeat in a contest with some future Far East aggressor.

Okinawa's vitally strategic position was recognized early in World War II. At the 1943 Cairo conference, top Allied officials determined that the Ryukyus Retto, of which Okinawa is the principal island, would not be part of post-war Japan. This was later reiterated at the Yalta and Potsdam conferences.

Okinawa emerged from conference-table obscurity to a position of spectacular world prominence in 1945. On 1 April of that year American troops stormed ashore and the battle to wrest the 67-mile-long island from a firmly entrenched enemy began. The fighting ended some 90 days later. Okinawa was secured at the cost of 12,000 American lives.

When Okinawa was captured, it was intended that the island would be used in final operations against Japan. This became unnecessary with the termination of the war; however, our basic purposes for holding Okinawa did not change with the end of hostilities.

We had learned from bitter experience that to abandon Far East positions was to risk the danger of another major conflagration. Consequently, plans were made to remain on Okinawa for an indefinite period. By establishing and retaining a strong base in the Ryukyus, the United States would possess a strategically located outpost insuring maximum influence toward peace and freedom throughout the entire Western Pacific.

A study of a map of the Far East clearly indicates why Okinawa is so important. It is the central island of the Ryukyus Chain which extends in a 790-mile arc from southern Japan to the seas off Formosa.

Primarily, Okinawa is a bomber-base. The mission of the Army is to support the Air Force and Navy and to guide the Ryukyuan people toward democratic Chairman Short Asks SecDef Wilson For "Attractiveness" Details Before 1 Jan.

Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) noting recent "statements of alarm by civilian and uniformed heads of the Services," has called upon Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson to supply the House Armed Services Committee by 1 Jan. with detailed answers to questions on Service Attractiveness.

Representative Short's letter is published in its entirety on page 275.

The communication undoubtedly will provide the basis for action on Capitol Hill during the next session of Congress to protect "fringe benefits."

Mr. Short told Secretary Wilson that "this Committee has noted with increasing concern adverse developments regarding the conditions of service of military personnel."

He said basic and comparative data are essential "in order that this committee may properly evaluate the problem of service housing, retirement, and direct and indirect benefits."

The House Armed Services Committee requested that the Defense Department prepare a comparative analysis to show differences in pay and benefits received by Foreign Service officers and Armed Services officers of comparable rank.

Questions are posed concerning pay, promotions, retirement, dependent travel, dependent medical care, commissaries, post exchanges, household goods, education of dependents, off-duty instruction and survivor benefits—among other data the committee desires.

Representative Short also asked Mr. Wilson to inform him of "instances in which there are discrepancies in the legal benefits afforded those in the Regular service and those in Reserve components of the Armed Forces, including benefits received by dependents of next of kin of a deceased member."

Secretary Wilson was asked to submit the Department's recommendations for equalization of Regular and Reserve benefits.

"UNDER STUDY"

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said this week that the question of whether or not the Pentagon would ask Congress to vote a military cost-of-living pay adjustment "is under study." He said that "the whole question of compensation of our military services," is being reviewed to find out "just exactly what is the right and fair thing to do."

It has been pointed out that under the existing law it is possible for the widow of a Reserve officer to receive as much as $525 a month in comparison with $75 a month for the widow of a Regular of exact same rank and service.

Representative Short also asked for a study of current officer retirement provisions, with emphasis on the advantages and disadvantages of permitting voluntary retirement after 20 years of service.

Concluding his letter, Mr. Short said to Mr. Wilson: "Your recommendations as to appropriate legislation necessary for remedying any defects in the current career planning program are solicited."

It is anticipated that Defense officials soon will make Mr. Short and his associates acquainted with the Womble Report on Service Attractiveness. This report is now in the hands of Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah.

Army Faces Quarter Million Loss in Men

The Army will be cut by about a quarter of a million men—roughly one-sixth its present strength—during the next 18 months, if a proposal currently receiving consideration at the highest Pentagon level is adopted. It has provoked quick dispute.

A plan is in the works to stabilize draft calls at about 29,000 per month for a period of a year and a half.

This is 8,500 less than has been declared necessary by Assistant Defense Secretary (Manpower and Personnel) John A. Hannah to eliminate peaks and valleys in Army manpower and maintain current strength on the basis of current reenlistment rates.

The threatened Army manpower loss comes at a time when its civilian chief, Secretary Robert T. Stevens, is warning against premature reliance on "push-button warfare" and is proclaiming that "nobody has yet produced an adequate substitute for a well-trained ground soldier." (THE JOURNAL, 31 Oct.).

Unless the Army is given a change in its missions, particularly overseas, Secretary Stevens will oppose vigorously such a manpower slash as is being considered in some Pentagon offices.

At the present time, the Army has in uniform roughly 100,000 men above the projected fiscal year-end strength next 30 June of 1,423,000.

It has been stated that draft calls of 23,000 per month through next June would bring the Army down to this total on schedule.

Citing need for economy, better utilization of manpower and—most importantly—combat effectiveness, Defense officials have for months been studying a plan to raise draft calls during the last six months of the current fiscal year to prevent necessity, beginning next July, of draft calls numbering 40,000 or 45,000 to fill up the ranks.

Wide circulation has been given to the fact that the Army suggested that this stabilized figure be about 37,000 per month.

Dr. Hannah was asked about this most recently at a press conference in which (Please turn to Page 277)

V. SECDEF EXPLAINS PROGRAM

(This week, as in the past four weeks, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson brought with him an Assistant Secretary of Defense—in this case the Comptroller, W. J. McNeil—and explained the activities under his cognizance. THE JOURNAL has published in full the previous prepared statements of Mr. Wilson).

I THINK a discussion of the financial management area will be helpful in line with our recent effort to achieve a better understanding of the Defense organization. It is simplest to describe the duties of the Assistant Secretary (Comptroller) as parallel to those of the VICE PRESIDENT for financial management of a large and widely dispersed corporation.

No one will question that Defense is big business. It is important that we manage our business on an efficient and economical basis. Generally, the duties in the area of financial management are outlined in the National Security Act.

The Act contains provisions which are intended to provide an overall fiscal structure which will facilitate the common use of facilities, make possible application of a sound management approach, and provide the means for the three military departments—separately administered by their respective Secretaries—to work together as a team on financial matters. It also calls for the preparation and submission of budgets in a form that clearly reflects the cost of performing activities of the department. It contemplates that the operation of industrial and commercial type activities will be established as corporate type units in a manner similar to private business.

AMONG OTHER PROVISIONS it calls for organization of inventories of the military departments into stock funds similar to those of a merchandising corporation. It calls for development of a property accounting system and periodic reports of property. It makes utilization of management funds to facilitate carrying out of joint and special operations.

In establishing a Comptroller organization for financial management it was contemplated there would be established clear lines of responsibility for fiscal management, a direct means of implementation of the financial management policies established by higher authority, a means of maintaining more uniform and accurate budget data needed in planning and control, better budget estimates, logical channels for review and analysis of financial problems to obtain prompt management decisions, continuing critical appraisal of activities in relation to funds expended, a more effective means to identify waste and inefficiency in operations and a means of providing accurate accountability for the use of funds and resources provided.

The National Security Act calls for adoption of the performance type of budget, the basic principles of which are:

(a) That all costs relating to a logical and identifiable program be included as a project or budget program and for inclusion in the total budget for presentation and justification to the Bureau of the Budget, the President and the Congress. Subsequently, it contemplated that after the appropriation of monies the funds would be administered and reported upon in the same framework.

(b) That there would be a logical and so far as practicable—a uniform grouping of projects or budget programs by the military departments, with this grouping paralleling a sound organization and management structure.

(c) That there would be a segregation between capital and current operating categories.

The reviews of the budget estimates we make are an effort to see that the estimates are consistent with reasonable program requirements, that costs of functional programs are readily identifiable. The reviews provide the means for management decisions which assure better balance between programs.

The Comptroller is charged also with promoting development and establishment of working capital funds—industrial funds and stock funds. The use of working capital funds provides a means for business-like management and financing of operations in industrial type and commercial type activities and for financing and operation of inventories—particularly common-use standard-stock classes.

It provides the basis of comparison of operating results of service activities within the military departments and in certain instances with similar activities in private business. It makes practicable the common use of available facilities and inventories. Under these methods we can charge costs against the project that uses the materiel, work or service.

WORKING CAPITAL FUNDS within the Department of Defense have proved their value. An outstanding example is MSTs—which because of increased operating efficiency possible under the businesslike management and financing is saving the taxpayers $120 million annually. Application of this principle has been made to approximately 60 installations in the Department of Defense.

In the inventory field, the working capital principle has been applied by the Navy to over 100,000 items of common-use standard-stock materiel. In the case of the Air Force the principle has been adopted for clothing, fuels and lubricants, and medical supplies. In the case of the Army it has been applied to clothing and equipment.

"Management Funds" have made it possible to achieve clear-cut management and financial responsibility for joint projects such as atomic tests, and for administrative type tasks.

A primary function in the area of the Comptroller is that of accounting. Accounting in the federal government has not, in the past, adequately served management. The major reason for the accounting and reporting systems is to provide timely, accurate, and understandable information which will assist administrative and managing officials.

There are several categories of accounting within the Department of Defense. One is appropriation accounting which generally covers the reporting of obligations and expenditures and available balances of appropriations by budget activities.

TRANSACTION ACCOUNTING includes systems and procedures used for civilian and military pay rolls, disbursing procedures for travel claims and suppliers' bills, individual and family allotments.

The adoption of working capital for industrial and commercial type operations requires the development, installation and operation of industrial type of accounting—similar to that required by large industrial or commercial enterprises in private business. Similarly, special accounting treatment is required under stock funds along lines adopted by private corporations.

The area of financial accounting for property not included under working capital funds is likewise receiving major attention.

Illustrative of special fields in the accounting area are development and installation of procedures in acquiring and disposing of foreign currencies as they apply to the Department of Defense. Other examples are problems relating to black market currencies, joint efforts with the General Accounting Office, Bureau of the Budget and Treasury in developing interdepartmental procedures, development of cost principles for use by contracting officers, arrangements for settlement by the Military Departments for single service procurement, payment to the Post Office Department for postage due on government mail, policies and procedures in connection with reimbursements in cross-servicing, and military expenditures abroad.

ANOTHER AREA assigned to the Comptroller is that of Progress Reports and Statistics. These reports and statistics cover personnel and materiel as well as money. Examples of reports are those on the status of Defense programs for the National Security Council, development of analytical aircraft reports and schedules to keep management apprised of actual performance against approved schedules, and the development of analytical charts and schedules.

Internal audit provides independent appraisals of the financial and business operations to insure adherence to legal requirements and to facilitate standardization of audit methods in the three Military Departments.

Supervision of contract financing on behalf of the Secretary of Defense is assigned to the Comptroller. Since the beginning of the current emergency private banks have extended credit to Defense contractors under guarantees by the Department of Defense. Credit has been authorized in gross amount of $2.2 billion. Borrowings under guaranteed loans are currently about $750 million. Supervision of advance payments has been assigned to the Comptroller. The greatest volume outstanding since the beginning of the present emergency has been $112 million. The cumulative total of advance payments authorized for the current emergency is a little less than $300 million, and amounts outstanding approximate $80 million.

Examination is being made of practices in connection with partial or PROGRESS PAYMENTS. These payments represent installments paid to contractors prior to the delivery of end items for work in process or inventories accumulated. The investment of the Department of Defense in such work in process and inventories under defense contracts is about $4 billion at present.

The Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) has one field activity—the Office of the Deputy Comptroller for Europe, located in Paris—established because of United States membership in NATO, the substantial portion of the Military Assistance Program allocated to Western European countries, and the extensive U. S. military activities in that area.

The U. S. participation in the ANNUAL REVIEW of NATO's financial programs is one of its primary tasks. This staff also makes field inspections.

AF Academy Bill Has Top Priority, Four Other Measures Set For Action

The much-discussed long-delayed Air Force Academy bill will command top priority when the House Armed Services Committee meets early in January, THE JOURNAL learned this week.

Four other measures have been set up for "priority consideration," one of them concerned with transfer of arms and equipment to the growing defense forces of Japan.

The other priority legislation includes the Warrant Officer Promotion Bill, whose history is traced back at least to 1949, a public works measure and a bill which will affect future policies for temporary promotion of officers during expansion of the Armed Forces.

Rep. Short

Preliminary staff work already is being accomplished on some of these bills. By the time Congress reconvenes, skilled staff aides of the Committee undoubtedly will have detailed data on all of them for Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) and his colleagues.

The Air Force Academy bill will have the strong support of Mr. Short and Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), ranking minority member of the Committee.

As disclosed in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, the Air Force is ready to go just as soon as Congress gives the green light. A tentative curriculum was published last week.

It can be expected that when hearings begin the Committee will ask to hear testimony from Air University officials, including Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, and Brig. Gen. Dale O. Smith, Director of Education.

Act, and to provide at an earlier date a more effective organization and more effective procedures for financial management, there was recently established by the Secretary of Defense the "Advisory Committee on Fiscal Organization and Procedures." This committee, of which Charles Cooper is Chairman, is comprised of individuals selected for their broad experience in the financial management of large diversified business activities. Mr. McNeil is a member of the committee as is Mr. Thomas, Assistant Secretary for Supply and Logistics.

I will briefly outline the present status of the 1955 BUDGET. During the summer, the three Military Departments and the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) developed certain facts and criteria for later application to the budget. On October 13th, discussions on the forces to be maintained and levels of Defense effort began in the National Security Council.

It was announced at that time that the discussions would continue in order to make necessary decisions on a Defense program during December. The three Military Departments began preparation of detailed estimates which are due for submission to the Secretary of Defense by 5 Dec. Review of these estimates will be undertaken as soon as the estimates of the Military Departments are received, and it is currently planned that detailed estimates will be ready for inclusion in the Federal Budget by 28 Dec.

It was stated last week that "given the go-ahead signal, the institution could be opened and underway within a few days after a site is designated."

The Warrant Officer Promotion Bill has been under review by representatives of all the Services and Committee staff experts. They are to meet again next week. Both at the Defense Department and on Capitol Hill, there is strong belief that at long last the Warrant Officer Promotion Bill—comparable to the Officer Personnel Act of 1947—will be enacted.

The legislation regarding transfer of arms and equipment to Japan is certain to receive widespread attention, although extended hearings on this matter probably will not be required.

The Defense Department is reported to be still working on its plans for public works legislation, which is understandable in view of the fact of the recent Defense Department Reorganization. It is not yet known whether the Pentagon will ask any funds for public works housing. At a recent press conference, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson indicated that other means are being studied.

The fifth priority bill will be of considerable interest to officers, for in this measure the Committee probably will establish some sort of formula for restricting temporary promotions during a period of expansion.

It is recalled that there was strong criticism in some quarters on Capitol Hill regarding temporary promotion policies after outbreak of hostilities in Korea. This led to enactment of the Davis Amendment, which the Armed Services Committee strongly opposed.

Chairman Short promised that a new formula would be developed, which, he said, would be acceptable to the Appropriations Committee and which would thwart the use of Appropriations Act Riders to govern promotion procedures.

The Committee has under consideration a plan to link the number of officers and the grade spread to the growth of the Services.

A committee aide points out that in the Army of 1,000,000 men, there may be 100,000 officers. If another 1,000,000 men should be added, the increase in the number of officers would be less than 100,000. Similarly, the promotions, particularly to the higher grades, would not be on the same basis as used in the 1,000,000 man Army.

This promises to be a complicated measure and one to which the Services can expect to have some opposition.

That the House Armed Services Committee already is so advanced in its work is a good sign, for it means there will be speedy action when Congress reconvenes.

This will afford the Committee ample opportunity to go into the matter of fringe benefits and other Service legislation prior to adjournment. It is to be remembered that in an election year there will be great pressure for an early adjournment.

Military legislation which does not receive early consideration consequently will be in peril.

Def. Dept. Takes Action To Answer Questions Raised by Chm. Short On "Attractiveness"

Pentagon officials this week were at work compiling data to be used in responding to questions raised by Chairman Dewey Short of the House Armed Services Committee in a letter to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

Representative Short's letter is seen as a tip-off to a probable inquiry by his Committee into the problem of "fringe benefits" shortly after Congress reconvenes in January.

Here is the complete text of the Chairman's letter to the Secretary:

Honorable Charles E. Wilson
The Secretary of Defense
Washington 25, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

For some time this Committee has noted with increasing concern, adverse developments regarding the conditions of service of military personnel. The recent statements of alarm by civilian and uniformed heads of the Services have increased this committee's apprehensions with respect to direct and indirect benefits, and living conditions of officer and enlisted personnel. Needless to say, these problems are of fundamental importance and their solution calls for our detailed consideration and study. Among the factors which are reported to have contributed to the present conditions are the rising costs of living coupled with a decrease in the so-called fringe-benefits of those in the Armed Services.

In order that this committee may properly evaluate the problem of service housing, retirement, and direct and indirect benefits, it is necessary for us to have certain basic and comparative data. Therefore, it is requested that the conclusions, and supporting facts, of the Hook Commission concerning service benefits (considered as part of pay) be made available to this committee.

It is further requested that a comparative analysis be made to show the differences in the pay and benefits received by Foreign Service officers and the pay and benefits received by armed forces officers, of comparable rank, in the following respects:

A. Basic pay and salaries, showing pay increases since 1950.

B. Allowances and benefits within the United States and abroad.

(1) Quarters, to include comparison of government quarters and furnishings abroad where such are available; and the allowances received by each where government quarters and utilities are not available both in the United States and abroad.

(2) Special allowances for cost of temporary quarters incurred by member and his family upon arrival at a new station.

(3) Cost of living allowances for specific areas abroad.

(4) Allowances for extraordinary and necessary expenses incurred by member incident to the establishment of his residence at his post of assignment.

(5) Allowances for service in dangerous and unhealthy areas or under adverse living conditions abroad.

(6) Allowance for maintaining wife and minor children elsewhere than in the country of assignment.

(7) Per diem allowances:

- (a) for officers,
- (b) for dependents.

C. Travel and related expenses in the United States and abroad.

(1) Conditions under which travel pay may be drawn for travel within the United States.

(2) Actual rates of reimbursement for travel performed by member.

(3) Conditions under which travel expenses of dependents may be claimed.

(4) Rates of reimbursement for travel performed by dependent.

(5) Percentage of instances in which Foreign Service and military officers are permitted to travel with their family in proceeding to a new duty station abroad.

D. Transporting or storing furniture and household and personal effects.

(1) Conditions under which expenses will be met by the Government.

(2) Weight allowances according to rank.

(3) Conditions under which expenses for storing will be met by the Government.

E. Conditions under which the government will provide household equipment for use of members on a loan basis, with typical list of items available for such use.

F. Conditions under which privately owned automobiles will be shipped at government expense.

G. Commissary or mess services, or post exchanges or equivalent facilities, available overseas.

H. Leaves of absence.

(1) Number of days authorized.

(2) Provisions for travel at government expense of member and dependents incident to leave.

(3) Provisions for accumulating or transferring leave.

(4) Average per capita annual leave actually taken during past two years by armed forces and foreign service officers.

I. Medical benefits available to member and dependents.

J. Approximate percentage of foreign service officers authorized government owned automobiles with chauffeur for private use compared with percentage of armed services officers with automobiles so assigned.

K. Allowances or payments authorized for domestic help or other employees connected with household maintenance.

L. Retirement and disability benefits.

(1) Provisions for entitlement to voluntary retirement with restrictions (statutory and administrative), if any.

(2) Financial benefits to wife and other dependents upon death of member.

(3) Restrictions on employment after retirement, if any.

M. Educational benefits.

(1) Provisions for expenses incident to the education of dependents of members.

(2) Provisions for, and approximate percentages of members receiving post-graduate or other instruction on a full-time basis at private institutions.

(3) Provisions for government payment for off-duty instruction showing availability of such benefits by rank.

N. Provisions relating to expenses incident to bringing home remains of personnel and family dying abroad.

O. A comparison of promotional opportunities for foreign service officers with those now in effect for officers of the Armed Services.

IN ADDITION to the above it is requested that this committee be provided with data showing those instances in which there are discrepancies in the legal benefits afforded those in the Regular Service and those in Reserve components of the armed forces, including benefits received by dependents or next of kin of a deceased member. This should include benefits administered by the military departments as well as those administered by agencies outside the Department of Defense. And also, it is requested that this Committee receive, at the same time, the Defense Department's recommendation for equalization of Regular and Reserve survivor's benefits.

Further, it is requested that a study be made of the effect of current OFFICER RETIREMENT provisions in order to ascertain the ultimate effect of their continuation on the career planning structure of the armed forces. Aside from its effect on officer career planning such a study should ascertain the actual monetary economies, if any, which result from voluntary retirement after 20 years' active service—i.e.: is it less expensive to permit officers to retire after 20 years of service and replace those officers with young junior officers than to require not less than 30 years of service for all officers. Your recommendations as to appropriate legislation necessary for remedying any defects in the current career planning program are solicited.

I should appreciate a reply to these questions not later than 1 Jan. 1954.

Very sincerely,

DEWEY SHORT,
Chairman.

Army Officer Promotions Begin, But Delay Noted

The Army this week released the names of 187 first lieutenants promoted to captain—the first to be advanced as a result of current selections which will see advancement for thousands of officers to captain, major and lieutenant colonel.

Simultaneously, it was learned that there will probably be a temporary slowdown in the planned promotion pace because of the fact that separations have not occurred as rapidly as had been anticipated.

The Army must play it safe to stay within budgetary limitations.

It is not likely that any additional promotions will be announced before the end of the month.

Officials said that the total number to be promoted probably will not be changed, but the dates of the actual advancements will be delayed in some cases.

It has been reported that more than 11,000 officers are eligible for consideration under previously announced criteria.

Navy Plans To Reduce Wave Commander Ranks, Action Will Cancel Vacancy Slated Next November

The Navy disclosed this week that it plans to make a further cut in the authorized number of Regular Line Wave commanders.

Although the Waves now have only four Regular Line commanders, the Bureau of Personnel said when the 1 January computations are completed "it is anticipated" that the Bureau "will recommend to the Secretary of the Navy that the authorized number of Wave commanders be reduced."

Acting JAG Rules

The action will cancel out the vacancy created next November by the retirement of Comdr. Bess Dunn.

The Acting Judge Advocate General of the Navy recently ruled that it is not mandatory for the Secretary of the Navy to convene a selection board for women officers in a year in which no vacancies occur. However, the law states that vacancies occurring within the ensuing 12-month period must also be considered and, in view of Commander Dunn's coming retirement, THE JOURNAL asked how the Bureau arrived at the statement that there were no vacancies.

Capt. W. G. Cooper, BuPers Assistant Chief for Plans, answered the question on the basis of vacancies in fiscal 1955. He said:

"In the administration of the promotion of Wave officers to the grade of commander a modified form of the running mate system as used with Navy male staff corps officers is employed. With this type of promotion plan a rate of flow is provided and equality of opportunity between adjacent groups of persons is maintained. The number of officers authorized in any grade then is adjusted to accommodate the promotion flow rate and the selection percentage.

Recommend Reduction

"In the case of the Wave commanders it is anticipated in consonance with the above that, upon the completion of the 1 January 1954 census and computation, this Bureau will recommend to the Secretary of the Navy that the authorized number of Wave commanders be reduced with the result of cancelling out the vacancy referred to.

"This question is not, however, pertinent at this time as our vacancies are customarily determined as near as possible on a fiscal year basis and the question of promotion in fiscal 1955 will not be settled until the fiscal 1955 strength is known."

Following Captain Cooper's statement, it was learned that another development in the Wave problem is now shaping up which may mean the Navy will be called before a Congressional committee to defend the promotion pattern which BuPers has established for the Waves. One of the leading Reserve organizations has interested itself in the case and reportedly will ask for a hearing on the matter when Congress reconvenes next January.

Select Women Marines, Two Named To Lt. Col.

The Marine Corps this week named six Regular Women Marines for promotion to lieutenant colonel and major.

The group included two officers—Majors Margaret M. Henderson and Elsie E. Hill—who were selected for lieutenant colonel, and four who were named for promotion to major: Captains Nita B. Warner, Ben A. Day, Jeanette I. Sustad and Mary J. Hale.

The selections give the Marine Corps a total of four Regular Women lieutenant colonels (or about 7½ per cent of their Regular officer strength), as compared to the Navy's total of five Regular Line Wave commanders (less than one per cent of the Regular Wave strength). The Integration Act permits both Services to have up to 10 per cent in the grade of commander-lieutenant colonel. The figures include the Director of the Waves and the Director of Women Marines.

Observers told THE JOURNAL they believe the Marine selections invalidate many of the arguments advanced by the Navy for not promoting more Wave officers to Regular commander. Both Services operate under the same law and in the past the Navy has pointed to "different" laws for the Army and Air Force as reasons why the latter Services can have more officers in the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Bolling, Third Army Commanding General, has announced that dignitaries from throughout the state and nation, as well as many high ranking military figures, have been invited to attend the formal cornerstone laying ceremonies at the new Women's Army Corps Center, Ft. McClellan, Ala., on 16 Nov.

The new WAC Center will house and train all women from throughout the nation who enter the Army.

Full scale operation of the Center is expected to get underway early next year.

All WAC training heretofore has been at Ft. Lee, Va., where it will continue until the opening of the new WAC Center at Ft. McClellan.

Guardsmen Busy

Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, has announced that some 240,000 National Guardsmen in more than 4,500 Army units completed 15 days of full-time field training during the summer.

About 26,000 NG officers and 214,000 enlisted men from units in all states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Hawaii, participated in the training which topped off 48 weekly periods of Armory training during the preceding year. National Guardsmen in Alaska, including the Alaskan Scout battalions, take their field training in the late fall months.

"The outstanding rate of attendance," General Erickson said, "attests both to the high morale existing among individual National Guardsmen and recognition of the importance of the National Guard to national security among the nation's business and industrial leaders."

Soldier's Medal To Lt. Col.

Lt. Col. James E. Hammer, former commanding officer of the 40th Infantry Division's 578th Engineer Combat Battalion, recently was awarded the Soldier's Medal, the nation's highest decoration for non-combat heroism.

Colonel Hammer was cited for directing fire extinguishing activities when an ammunition dump in the battalion area was ignited. Despite exploding ammunition, he directed a tank into the middle of the blaze, putting out the fire and spreading the ammunition. His action was credited with saving the lives of many soldiers in the area and preventing the loss of great ammunition supplies.

Army Faces Quarter Million Manpower Loss, Proposal Seen Certain To Provoke Controversy

he was joined by Secretary Wilson on 27 Oct.

"I am in favor of doing what needs to be done to level out the cycle," said Assistant Secretary Hannah referring to the odd fiscal year peaks in draft calls, "but we have made no decision as to where it should be."

He was asked if he still favored raising Army draft calls to the figure of 36,000 a month.

Dr. Hannah responded: "I don't think I mentioned it, did I?"

The chances are that in the midst of the rapid-fire question and answer session, the Defense personnel chief did not recall a statement he made on 16 Sept., also at a press conference.

"If we are going to maintain an Army of approximately the present size," said Dr. Hannah, "we should put in through the draft, if the reenlistment rate stays about where it is, about 37,500 per month and, of course, that is what we would like to do. . . . We may have to go over strength some time."

Significantly, Dr. Hannah noted that the 37,500 figure was required to maintain approximately present strength.

Apparently, the Defense Department—or at least certain top officials in its highest echelons—believe that it is possible now to reduce manpower.

This could be achieved in orderly fashion by the 29,000 per month draft calls. Thus, in an 18-month period there would be a loss of 153,000 men, compared with the 37,500 per month calls.

As pointed out, the Army already is due to lose about 100,000 men between now and next 30 June.

The additional 6,000 men per month who would be brought into the Army during the current fiscal year if draft calls went from 23,000 to 29,000 in the period January-June of 1953 would be offset, with interest, by the loss of the 51,000 men now authorized as the so-called "Korea Package."

Defense Secretary Wilson has explained that the current fiscal year budget allots 51,000 men for the Army (an additional 5000 for the Marines) to meet Korea pipeline requirements.

He has said that when the situation permits these 51,000 men will be cut from the Army. In fact, during his budget testimony in Congress this year, the Defense Secretary said the Army's manpower objective was 1,423,000 by the end of fiscal '54, but noted that with end of hostilities this could be reduced to 1,372,000.

At his press conference this week, Mr.

Wilson was asked about the possibility of increasing draft calls from 23,000 to 37,000.

He said he was in favor of the principle of eliminating peaks and valleys in the Army manpower situation, but expressed the hope that this could be done with calls below a cited figure of 37,000.

His remark gives strong additional evidence that the total may be about 29,000 unless last minute protests by the Army Secretary are so impressive that this figure is revised upwards.

On the basis of Mr. Stevens' forthright address last week on the need for continued ground force strength, the plan to cut Army strength is certain to generate formidable controversy at the Pentagon.

Navy Changes Senior Courses At War College

The senior courses in military strategy and tactics at the Naval War College are being consolidated into a single, two-year course in "Naval Warfare," according to an announcement by Admiral Robert B. Carney shortly before his departure for the Far East.

The Chief of Naval Operations said the change "is one of the most significant" to be made in the 70-year history of the College.

The new course in "Naval Warfare" consolidates two one-year courses in "Strategy and Tactics" and "Strategy and Logistics." It will be arranged, however, so that officers may be ordered to take either part of the course on a one-year arrangement or both parts on a two-year arrangement, depending on rank and experience and the needs of the service.

The new course is designed to provide military officers, and particularly naval officers, with a better understanding of international political factors so that they may relate their command decisions to the political realities of the day. The revised curriculum takes into account the complexity and advancement in modern warfare, and the increased responsibility of military personnel in Joint and Allied Commands.

According to Vice Adm. R. L. Conolly, who retired this week as President of the College, the new course will carry students through to the highest levels of command responsibility. Admiral Conolly, who becomes President of Long Island University, directed the study which resulted in the new course.

The institution of the two-year course will become effective in June. The Navy said courses at the War College will continue to be open to senior officers of all military services, as well as the Coast Guard, Foreign Service officers of the State Department, and civilian scientists attached to other government departments requiring advanced training in naval warfare.

Outline Holiday Leave Plans For Navy-USMC

The Navy and Marine Corps this week disclosed plans for annual holiday leave for their personnel during the Christmas season.

Marine Corps commands within the continental U. S. will, insofar as practicable, release personnel traveling on holiday leave on 17 and 18 Dec., and 28 and 29 Dec., based on a 10-day leave period.

Students in formal Marine schools will be given holiday leave if the needs of the service permit. Recruits in "boot" training will not be granted leave.

Navy recruits under training will receive 14 days' leave if they have completed the first six weeks of training. The holiday leave will be granted in lieu of the normal recruit leave which follows completion of recruit training.

Navy enlisted trainees other than recruits will be granted leave and all regular courses of instruction will be suspended during the period 19 Dec. to 3 Jan.

Leave for ship's company personnel during the holiday period may be granted at the discretion of the commanding officer within the limitations imposed by security and maintenance of essential services.

Holiday leave for Atlantic Fleet blue-jackets will commence on 25 Nov. Two

Army Navy Air Force Journal 279

40-day leave periods have been set aside for the Fleet and about one-half of the ships in the Fleet will be scheduled for each period. The first period will be 25 Nov. to 4 Jan.; the second will be 16 Dec. to 25 Jan.

Although a commanding officer may grant leave to only one third of his crew at one time, Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, CinCLant, has directed a liberal liberty policy for those remaining on board ship while awaiting their turn for leave.

Lackland Action Spotlights Energetic AF Program To Boost Prestige and Responsibility of Non-Coms

(Ed. Note—The Air Force during recent months has launched an ambitious program to raise the prestige and responsibility of non-commissioned officers. The campaign was launched when Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter was Personnel Chief and is being pressed with equal vigor by Lt. Gen. Emmet O'Donnell, present DCS, Personnel. From Lackland AFB, Tex., "Gateway to the Air Force," comes this progress report.)

Tangible developments in the comprehensive Lackland NCO development program spelled out implementation of five phases of the long range project.

As placed in effect three months ago by Brig. Gen. Wycliffe E. Steele, base commander, the program includes designation of a Non Com of the Week and operation of an NCO advisory council, a third of whose members are replaced at quarterly intervals to maintain a rotating membership among senior Lackland noncoms. All activities are aimed at giving added recognition to AF noncoms.

Talking Stage Over

Primary development was publication of a base regulation which embodies ideas heretofore merely in the "talking" stage at base level.

The regulation (LAFB 39-16 dated 21 Sept.) has been published and is being distributed throughout the base. Among other policies, the reg outlines one for "excusing noncommissioned officers from miscellaneous duties (which would comprise) the responsibility of their positions (and) leadership functions (so that) leadership functions may be more efficiently accomplished."

Separate billets (taking the form of private rooms, private bays or private barracks at the discretion of squadron commanders) and separate dining hall facilities are called for in the new regulation.

It also makes provisions for appointing noncoms to promotion boards and as technical advisors on personnel classification boards. In line with the new reg, master sergeants are to be excused from routine squadron formations, discrepancies of NCOs are not to be posted on squadron bulletin boards and the integrity of noncoms is to be considered beyond question.

With the approval of Technical Training Air Force headquarters, the regulation says, NCOs may be used as accountable supply agents. It sets forth that NCOs must be capable of conducting drill and ceremonies and must have knowledge of the uniform code of military justice.

On-Base NCO School

A second action included plans for an on-base NCO school. The proposal is being evaluated by Wing Operations pending authorization setting up the mechanics of the school. The school was termed a virtual certainty with the reservation, however, that "no one can be sure right now exactly how and to whom it will be offered."

Third a recent 20-question survey of approximately 1,400 base noncommissioned officers has been completed, it was announced. The results are soon to be released in a study form after review and evaluation by General Steele and other top officers of the base.

Formative recommendations will be submitted in an October meeting of the NCO Advisory Committee. The committee will also forward a report of previous action for evaluation of authorities at base level and higher headquarters.

Six members of the board will be retired this month to be replaced by six new members.

Incoming members are M/Sgt. Elmer E. Pfennig, Pre-Flight School, M/Sgt. Lewis R. Mason, 3700th Personnel Processing Squadron; M/Sgt. Veto Gavens, 3720th BMTG; M/Sgt. Lester C. Hanson, 3720th BMTG; M/Sgt. Robert E. Smith, 741st AC&W Squadron; and M/Sgt. Cora W. Einfeldt, 3700th WAF Squadron of the 3700th Air Base Group.

Deploy 465th TCW To Europe

Plans to deploy the 465th Troop Carrier Wing to Europe in the near future were announced this week by the Air Force.

The wing, which is part of the Tactical Air Command, will leave this country in separate groups. The advance party and the three squadrons of the tactical group, presently completing operational training at Donaldson AFB, S. C., will leave first for their new bases in Europe.

Two of the three squadrons will go to bases in Germany and the third squadron will be based with the advance party and tactical group headquarters in France. The remainder of the wing headquarters, which is part of the 18th AF under Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglas, Jr., located at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., will follow in successive stages to France.

Equipped with Fairchild C-119 aircraft, the 465th Wing, which is commanded by Brig. Gen. Franklin Rose, will be the 10th wing to be deployed by TAC to Europe. This is in addition to the three wings TAC trained and deployed for duty with UN forces in Korea.

Gen. Born Elected

Col. Charles E. Cheever, USA-Ret., Secretary-Treasurer of the United Services Automobile Association has announced the election of Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born, USAF, Commander of the Crew Training Air Force as a director of the Association.

General Born replaces Maj. Gen. J. K. Lacey, USAF, recently transferred to the Far East Command.

Air National Guard Gets Its First Sabrejets

The Air Force has started delivering F-86 Sabrejets to the Air National Guard.

Maj. Gen. Earl T. Ricks, Deputy Chief, National Guard Bureau, said first deliveries of the factory-overhauled Sabrejets went to the 186th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Great Falls, Mont., and 190th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Boise, Ida. The two tactical units are part of the Air National Guard's 142d Fighter-Interceptor Wing, headquarters at Spokane, Wash.

Scheduled to receive the jet airplanes in the next few months are the other two squadrons of the Northwest Wing, the 116th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Spokane, and the 123d Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Portland, Oreg., and the two tactical units of the 128th Fighter-Interceptor Wing, the 176th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Madison, Wisc., and the 126th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, Milwaukee, Wisc.

The planes are part of the varied equipment currently being delivered by the Air Force to units throughout the country under the jet-plane conversion program of the Air National Guard.

More than 200 jet fighters and jet trainer planes, F-80s, F-84s and T-33s, have already been delivered to approximately 25 Air National Guard Fighter-Interceptor and Fighter-Bomber Squadrons.

Of the Air Guard's 87 tactical squadrons, 60 squadrons are scheduled to be partially jet-equipped by the end of the current fiscal year, 30 June 1954.

The National Guard plans to devote $25 million this year to the preparation of facilities for jet planes.

Twenty-two wings, or 80 per cent of the Air Guard, were called to active military duty during the Korean war. All of these wings are now back home and the ANG is in a three-year rebuilding program.

Present plans call for a 27-wing Air Guard of approximately 70,000 officers and men and more than 2,000 combat-type aircraft by 30 June 1955.

SAC Measures Work

The Strategic Air Command will launch command-wide implementation of the Air Force "work measurement" program this month when base commanders and manpower officers convene at SAC headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nebr., for a two-day work measurement seminar.

"Work measurement" is a new Air Force-wide program designed to gauge actual work done in terms of standard performance, and thereby enable supervisors to plan operations more efficiently and turn their attention to deficient areas.

Modelled after civilian industry efficiency systems, "work measurement" ultimately is expected to supplement and supplant all existing Air Force management measurement systems.

The two-day SAC seminar will be conducted at Offutt on 17 and 18 Nov., at which time base representatives will hear first-hand accounts of SAC pilot tests already conducted at Hunter AFB, Ga.

Phased introduction of the work measurement system is due to begin immediately in certain work areas at every SAC base.

"The responsibility of the Department of Defense is to see to it that our military strength is sufficient to resist aggression and prove a strong deterrent to war. We must be prepared to carry out such military missions as the Congress, the President, and the American people decide to be necessary."—SECRETARY OF DEFENSE CHARLES E. WILSON.

Pay "Under Study." The Pentagon education of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson could be said this week to be well on its way to completion. He has learned to turn a potentially embarrassing question with the serviceable remark: "The matter is under study." So stated Mr. Wilson in response to a press conference inquiry from a JOURNAL reporter as to whether or not the Department would ask Congress for a military pay raise next year.

The military pay increase problem conceivably will win some Pentagon official his Ph.D., for it has been "under study" since the day Secretary Wilson and his team took charge of the Defense Department. Actually, it was on the previous day, 19 Jan., that his predecessor asked Congress to vote a pay adjustment for men and women in uniform.

Since January, Mr. Wilson has had scholarly outside assistance and advice in the Department's pay study. The Strauss Commission told him that a cost-of-living pay adjustment was desirable. The Rockefeller Commission warned that no Defense Department Reorganization could succeed without competent personnel and noted that "It was, on several occasions, brought to our attention that the inducements and rewards of the civilian and military career services may not have kept pace with the attractions of private enterprise."

Within the Defense Department, Deputy Secretary Roger M. Kyes has mentioned on several occasions the necessity of keeping military benefits on a par with those in industry, while Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah has stated publicly that the Defense Department supports a pay increase. As Manpower and Personnel chief, the Michigan State president gave hard study to the pay question.

Somewhere during the study, Mr. Wilson, bolstered by such authoritative advice as cited above and having been able, in the midst of the heavy pressure of his global responsibilities, to catch up on some homework on the pay inquiry, went to the White House. There he advocated a cost-of-living pay adjustment, but reportedly received a cool reception. (THE JOURNAL, 17 Oct.) So the study goes on. In view of the obvious opposition of the Budget Bureau to the pay raise plan, Service personnel can take some encouragement from Mr. Wilson's remarks this week. He did not say the issue was dead. He did not slam the book shut on pay adjustment hopes; he said "the matter is under study."

Free World Ambassadors. Throughout the world, men and women of all the Uniformed Services, voluntarily and characteristically, already are busy with spirited preparations to make Christmas a happier time for underprivileged children in the scores of thousands. In Korea, as illustrated by the photograph on the opposite page, money is being collected to buy toys, clothing and holiday food treats for youngsters who have known much suffering and little joy in recent years. The absence of hostilities will permit the U. S. forces in Korea and servicemen of other U.N. nations to go all out this year in the conduct of what may appropriately be tagged "Operation Happiness." Similarly, in Europe, and in fact wherever there are U. S. soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines, there will be gala celebrations for children. The men of the Armed Forces will have

Fringe Benefits Outside

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The editorial observations made in the 3 October issue of THE JOURNAL concerning "fringe benefits" are to be commended. The point is well made.

In this connection, a page from the classified section of the Chicago Daily News for 5 Oct. is enclosed and illustrates some of the fringe benefits being offered by industry. The comparison of pay offered for office boys and messengers with the base pay of a second or first lieutenant is, I think, particularly interesting.

(Note: The page from the Chicago Daily News, received with the above letter, included a number of interesting "Help Wanted" advertisements, including one by a bank offering positions including: "free insurance, free hospitalization, pensions, profit sharing, five-day week, better-than-average salary, lunchroom," etc. A railroad seeks "assistant office clerks, start at $257 to $289 a month. No experience necessary." A magazine asks for "Look-up clerks, no experience needed, starting salaries $212 per month, merit increases, two weeks vacations first year, three weeks vacation after 2 years, music while you work, recreation facilities," and free copies of the magazine. Another firm asks for "office boys—messengers, $57 for 5-day week.")

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The current campaign to narrow and eventually to eliminate VA medical and hospital treatment benefits should be noted by all Service personnel, active and retired. The campaign is principally characterized by avarice, and a total disregard for the basic welfare of a large segment of our society. If it is permitted to succeed in denying present VA benefits of medical care to veteran personnel, the next step will be to curtail and further restrict medical services to retired military persons and their dependents. The impetus behind such an organized campaign is patently a selfish financial motive—and, in the sense that it is being employed, is both unworthy of the best traditions of the medical profession, and unwarranted by any realistic type of reasoning. If the private physician and surgeon is professionally competent and adequately trained, he will encounter no worries with respect to building a sufficiently remunerative practice anywhere within these United States.

SERVICE WIDOW

A Noble Tribute. For the first time in history, an officer of U. S. Armed Forces who is officially on the active list has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. The world renowned honor has gone to General of the Army George C. Marshall, former Chief of Staff, Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. This week, the general, who has served his nation and the free world with such distinction, was at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D. C., where he was under treatment for a virus infection. The Services wish for him a speedy and complete recovery and salute him for the great honor which has come from Oslo.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—On the eve of the celebration of Armistice Day on 11 Nov. the situation of Germany is certainly as grave and probably much more so than it was in 1918. A quarter of a century ago she was officially at peace with revolutionary Russia; today the Red Armies, strong in personnel and materiel, are driving Hitler's troops back to the Dnieper. Then, she had been deserted by Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria; today, Italy, her enemy then and former ally now, has surrendered and Hungary and Bulgaria are withholding aid to their Axis ally.

50 Years Ago—Keen interest has been aroused in Navy circles at that portion of a report advocating the creation of a Navy Ordnance Corps.

90 Years Ago—The Army of the Potomac is on all hands looked to as the only force that can save our East Tennessee columns. If Lee ventures on the step of further depleting his Army for these Western operations, General Meade should find the means to make him pay dearly for it. There are indications that the work so imperatively imposed on the Army in Virginia, by every consideration of military prudence, will speedily be entered on. It is publicly announced that all able-bodied troops in garrison at Washington are being relieved from duty and sent to the field. Their place will be filled by the Invalid Corps.

No Variable Pay!

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Although a little late, the recent article in THE JOURNAL (17 Oct.) indicating Secretary Wilson's preference for an "escalator clause" pay raise for military personnel, spurs me to present my opinion on the matter. I don't want any part of a pay scheme which is tied to a variable, be it the cost-of-living or any other index.

First, I want to know where I stand. I certainly do not claim that I can predict what a dollar will buy next year, or the year after, or ten years hence. But I am confident that I can plan for my needs and those of my family if my pay is subject to change only after deliberation by Congress. When it can be higher or lower by an unknown amount, planning becomes uncertain. Second, and more to the point, I cannot see why now is the time to tie pay to prices. Not one economist in one hundred is forecasting an increase in business activity. Instead, rather frantic rationalizations of why the coming dip will be but slight seem to characterize their predictions. Is this the time to get on an escalator, when the chances favor its going down? I don't think so. We argue that we have suffered because prices were rising faster than our pay. Let's let the lag work for us, for a change, during the decline.

If it is considered advisable to raise military pay, then I favor a flat raise or nothing at all. But I will gladly accept the escalator clause when Congress puts itself on the same basis.

Rising Interest in Pakistan

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

SOME surprisingly frank unofficial remarks in Pakistan during the past week support the expectation that this most easterly of Moslem states shortly will be certified as eligible for American military aid grants. Pakistan has long been eligible for military supplies on a reimbursable basis, along with 50-odd other nations, and has acquired a moderate amount of military goods in that manner. But its admission to the other category would presumably lead to some very considerable improvement in Pakistan's present 250,000-man army, both in size and in modern equipment. And it would also lead, under the normal agreement basic to our grants in aid, to some very considerable improvement in Pakistan's air facilities available to us in event of emergency. Both betterments are significant, and mark as important a development in our own strategic planning as does the recent treaty with Spain, both nations being outside the North Atlantic Treaty alliance.

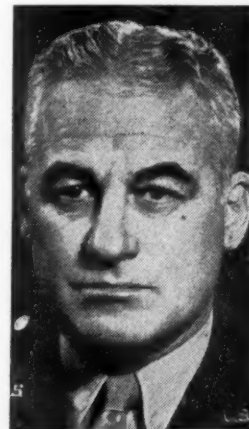

The prospective Pakistan-American agreement marks a decision forced upon us by the regretted obduracy of Egypt, plus the equally regretted endurance of the Arab-Israel cold war. For a long time, our statesmen and those of Britain, with recurring assistance from France and Turkey, made an earnest effort to build up a five-power Middle East Defense organization, independent of NATO but concerned with the same prime objectives of maintaining world peace and the integrity of small nations. The proposed arrangement, whereby America, Britain, France, Turkey, and Egypt would recognize their common interest in those main objectives, as well as their special interest in the building-up of a substantial and united defense at Suez, appeared beneficial to all five nations and to their weak neighbors as well. Neither the original plan or with suggested modifications interested Egypt.

NORTH OF SUEZ the problems have been different in kind but similar in that they are apparently insoluble. The Arab states have shown no inclination whatever to transform their long-extended armed truce with Israel into a settled and peaceable relationship; they maintain their boycott on Israel exports and their blockade of Israel frontiers, to Israel's very serious injury and, in some measure, their own as well. Worse, Israel's long frontier remains exposed to marauders, whose forays are promptly answered by Israeli retaliation in which too often women and children and useful installations are the only victims. There is not the slightest indication at present that this cold war will be ended or abated.

TURKEY, in consequence, finds itself with an increasingly firm NATO support on the west, but a void on the east so far as protection is concerned. The Arab nations are weak and united only in their hatred of Israel, it would seem. Iran has just picked itself off the economic and political mat and is trying to maintain its integrity; it finds itself presently in negotiations with Russia at the same time that it is trying to recover cooperative arrangements with the west so as to resume a profitable operation of its oil wells. But a mere mention of the tumults in Egypt, in Iran, and along the Israel frontiers shows how far we are from an effectively unified Middle East defense, and how far we are from any reasonable hope of attaining one. Our recognition of this—like our recognition two years ago of hoping for any formal cooperation between NATO and Spain—has led us toward a realization that we must seek an alternative, partly for relieving Turkey's natural anxiety, partly for relieving our own.

THE MIDDLE EAST fortunately is not wholly confused. On the west there is a substantial bastion, thanks to Turkey itself which lately has been greatly strengthened and which is in process of further strengthening, and thanks also to NATO's two large forces—the Southern Sector of General Gruenther's European Command, under Admiral William M. Fichteler, and the Mediterranean Command under Admiral Lord Mountbatten. This western bastion, therefore, is strong and growing perceptibly stronger. One must go all the way to Pakistan to find material for creation of an eastern bastion, but that country of 75,000,000 people, with British Commonwealth affiliation and with proved energy to maintain its independence, provides a lively prospect. Pakistan's position vis à vis Central Asia is such as to make desirable the improvement of its own defensive posture (to which it already is giving a very considerable part of its budgeted funds) and to justify such assistance as we can provide, of a non-reimbursable nature. It is broadly, but not formally, qualified to receive this assistance, and for some time it has been apparent that, of all the Near East and African nations which might be considered for such aid under Title II of the Mutual Security act, Pakistan is the only one which can be thought of as likely to get any substantial amount.

GENERAL NATHAN F. TWINING, Chief of the Air Staff, doing his best, along with Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott, to set the Spanish airbase program in perspective during the two officials' preliminary tour of the four projected base areas this past week, succeeded only in getting themselves badly misunderstood on atomic matters. What the Americans apparently tried to say was that U. S. Air Force units operating from the Spanish bases at some time in the future will include some which "will be supplied with atomic weapons"—at the appropriate time. They were widely quoted by press and radio as implying that atomic bombs will be stockpiled at the Spanish bases. Overseas shipment of the atomic bombs is so manifestly outside the sphere of service responsibility that neither of these cautious officials can well have said anything more than the mild version given next day by Secretary Talbott, who was considerably astonished on Monday by reading what the Spanish interviewers thought he had said on Sunday. The extreme remark which had been so widely quoted was promptly knocked down in Washington, first by Secretary of State Dulles who stated bluntly that the United States has no plan for storing atomic weapons in Spain and added that, if it does so, there will be no announcement. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson offered only the commendation that "Secretary Dulles made a good statement."

Adm. Davis Named Director

Vice Adm. Arthur C. Davis has assumed duties as Director of the Office of Foreign Military Affairs, in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Affairs).

The Office of Foreign Military Affairs has been reorganized to absorb functions performed previously by other agencies within the ISA area.

Admiral Davis, who had been Deputy to the U. S. Representative on the Standing Group, NATO, since March 1952, succeeds Rear Adm. H. P. Smith.

Admiral Smith, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL, has been assigned as Commander, Amphibious Group Two. He had served as Director of OFMA since December 1951, and prior to that was Deputy Chief of Navy Information.

Adm. Carney in Far East

Admiral Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, arrived this week in Tokyo during a three-week tour of the Far East.

He will remain in Japan until 10 November, when he and his party will depart for Manila and later visits to Saigon and Formosa. They will return to Washington on 19 Nov.

Accompanied by Mrs. Carney, Vice Adm. James L. Holloway, Jr., Capt. William J. Marshall, Lt. Col. Willard C. Leake and Comdr. Slade Cutter, the CNO stopped at Hawaii and Guam en route to Japan.

General Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, returned to Washington early this week from an inspection trip which took him to Japan, Korea and Alaska. He is the first JCS member to return from the current overseas visits.

Reader Lists Value of Out-Dated Uniforms, Says "Let It Alone," Discards Valued at $659

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It's moving time again; being overweight by many thousands of pounds of household goods I climbed the attic stairs to see if I could cut down by discarding any junk. Maybe it was happenstance, maybe it was intentional on the part of my wife; but anyway, there in a mite, accusatory row hung the uniforms which in the past few years have been declared obsolete or obsolescent. Here's a list of what I found and the cost:

Long wool overcoat	$125.00
Short wool overcoat	85.00
Two green Eisenhower jackets and slacks	150.00
Pair green slacks	25.00
Two green wool shirts	38.00
Three wool OD shirts	49.00
Two shade 31 blouses and slacks	92.00
Trench coat	95.00
	$659.00

This list does not include wool breeches, boots, leggings, Sam Brownes, sabres, white shirts, black and OD ties, pre-war blues all of which run the cost beyond $1,200, and they were relatively sound dollars, too. I am ashamed to think of the insurance I could have bought for my family with this wasted money, or to recall the mean little economies they underwent to clothe me with these items so casually brushed off my back by the flick of a wrist.

That sight started me thinking. We have bigger and better throw-away days ahead of us in the Army. We are threatened with a complete new green uniform; head to foot we must have the new look. Any day now we may awaken to find all we wear must be replaced at once just as the wool overcoats and the trench coat disappeared. But that isn't all; with the authorization of the blue uniform for enlisted men, it is certain officers will be required to buy a complete blue outfit at calamitous prices which naturally won't put the same dent in a monthly salary of $1,000 as it does in one of $500. So we face up to another burden, the need to save and scrimp for a series of gaudy new outfits, which in their turn will be set aside at the caprice of our Pentagon superiors.

I say this to those who in the past fifteen years have tinkered with the uniform like a finicky old-maid seamstress adding a gusset here and a gore there to an otherwise suitable garment: let the uniform alone; it is bad enough now, but you will only worsen it. In the meantime, you have laid over me, and I presume others, the distressing menace of an expenditure beyond my means. Come down from your tower of privilege in Cloud-Cuckoo-Land and face reality before you blithely blab out the good word: shiny new uniforms for the Army.

As you see, I am indignant. I am angry at myself with the anger that comes when a sucker learns he has been gulled. Until my trip upstairs I had felt useful and proud in belonging to a profession, almost a brotherhood. But that row of discarded uniforms disillusioned me; not with the awakening which comes from "there isn't any Santa Claus," but with the sickening feeling of "say it ain't so, Joe." I now realize I have been used cynically, that the fine old maxims, "loyalty goes down as well as up," "take care of your soldiers and they will take care of you," "rank has responsibilities as well as privileges," are words only today, handy for running the Army, the sort of stuff to feed the troops in the TI&E party line.

In short, the session in the attic has opened my eyes. I have lost respect and honor for the civilian and military direction of the Army.

MEMO

*News And Gossip
For Journal Readers*

TELESCOPED BUDGET ACTION this year, as indicated in SecDef Wilson's report (page 274) will mean the Services will have less opportunity than is normally the case for presenting their reclamas (or protests) after the money bill is marked up for transmittal to the Budget Bureau. Actually, the BOB gets a double crack at the funds bill. Its representatives sit in on Pentagon deliberations, then work on the money measure again before it is sent to Congress by the President.

FAST FISCAL ACTION will be essential, for the Services must submit detailed estimates to Mr. Wilson by 5 Dec. and these must be ready for inclusion in the Federal Budget by 28 Dec. Some basic decisions yet remain to be made; for example that concerned with Army manpower.

THAT'S THE REASON Mr. Wilson wanted to send Congress a one-line item for Defense spending, with detailed back-ups to come later. He felt this would be more efficient, but he was overruled at a higher level. Although the FY '55 budget will be the first worked up from scratch by Mr. Wilson and his associates, there is one notable and fortunate exception. The Comptroller, Asst. SecDef McNeil, has directed preparation of every defense budget since creation of the National Military Establishment and later of the Department of Defense.

THE KOREAN SERVICE MEDAL is not likely soon to be placed into procurement. Defense officials say there are no plans at the present time to begin issuing the medal, for which scores of thousands are eligible.

QUIET EFFORTS, thus far without any booming publicity, are being made to gain Congressional approval for more bands in the Service. The Senate Appropriations Committee this year was critical of the number of bandmen. As a result, the Air Force made plans to cut its bands from 97 to 46, its bandmen from over 3000 to about 1800 to meet the expressed intent of the Committee. The Army which had 138 bands in fiscal '53 has dropped 15 already and has been studying a further cut to 86. Now, however, there are rumblings from Capitol Hill which indicate that some legislators think things have gone too far. For one thing, Service bands are always stellar attractions at community civic parades. Congressmen are realizing that the Armed Forces will have to turn down an increasing number of their requests in the future if bands are deactivated.

PENTAGON REPORTERS noted this week that there are at the Pentagon, by title of address, eight Asst. SecDefs and one "Senator," who is actually the ninth Asst. Sec'y. At his press conference this week, Mr. Wilson referred to his Asst. SecDef for Legislative and Public Affairs as "Senator" Seaton. Asst. Sec'y Seaton served for a short time as U. S. Senator from Nebraska. He will be a busy man on Capitol Hill next year; it remains to be seen what form of address his former colleagues use.

ANNOUNCING HOLIDAY LEAVE plans, the Army said it would not be possible for recruits to be given time off from training in view of the necessity to meet replacement demands, particularly overseas. The Marine Corps puts it differently: "Recruits in boot training . . . will share the holiday festivities at camp." Result's the same, whatever the tinsel on the terminology.

POINTED INDICATION that Service civilian leaders are not expected to be "yes" men during Congressional testimony came this week as Army Sec'y Stevens and Air Force Asst. Sec'y White both took strong positions in support of the retention of a general officer as Comptroller for the two Services. SecDef Wilson believes a civilian should hold this post, as does Navy Sec'y Anderson. Senator Flanders, subcommittee chairman, called it a "two-two tie."

ON THE FISCAL FRONT, Mr. Wilson said this week he thinks each Service should have an additional Asst. Sec'y to be in charge of financial management. He says legislation to this end probably will be introduced. Since taking office, Mr. Wilson has added six new Asst. SecDefs plus a General Counsel with equal rank.

STILL MORE ASST. SECS. would be added if the Defense Dept. and Congress listen to the newly renewed plea of the Reserve Officers Assn. That group insists that there should be an Asst. SecDef. and Asst. Secretaries for each Service (also a Deputy Chief of Staff) to be concerned exclusively with Reserve Affairs. The ROA also wants a setup comparable to the present National Guard Bureau.

MATS, INC. is in the offing. A plan is developed which would put the Military Air Transport Service on a corporate type operation similar to that employed by the Military Sea Transportation Service, which receives a cash operating fund and charges its users. Asst. SecDef McNeil says the MATS plan may be adopted by the end of the year. It will be interesting to see how the deal is figured out so that MATS can assess charges for such activities as the Air Rescue Service.

FIFTY CIVILIAN EDUCATORS have been hired by the Army to go to Korea as advisors to the Eighth Army. It's part of the stepped-up I&E program which Gen. Taylor launched when hostilities ended. To insure tactical integrity of all units, there is no present plan for establishing G.I. schools and "colleges" such as was done after end of WWII. Gen. Taylor wants educational facilities brought to the men.

CIVILIAN MEMBERSHIP on Navy selection boards—a proposal made by Representative Yates (D-Ill) has received little support on Capitol Hill. The Navy has sent a letter to the House Armed Services Committee opposing the plan, stating that civilians are not qualified to pass judgment on promotion "irrespective of their intelligence, professional skill or motivation." The Rockefeller Commission gave present selection systems good marks.

NATO'S FORCES in Southern Europe apparently are moon struck. The last major air defense exercise in the Mediterranean—a nine-day maneuver in March—was called "New Moon." This month air defense forces of five nations from Gibraltar to Turkey will participate in a new exercise, "November Moon."

A LARGE MANEUVER involving 60,000 Army troops for a period of about 20 days is being planned for next April-May in the Ft. Bragg-Camp Mackall area of North Carolina. No information was released on the name of the maneuver and other pertinent data. Army leaders are hopeful that the world situation and a reduced training requirement will permit more extensive field tests than has been the case the past few years.

One if by land...
two if by sea

But what if by air?

Surprise air attack is a possibility at any time. Long-range bombers equipped with atomic weapons could sneak by defenses — and only with the help of adequate detection can our Air Force and Army discourage and prevent such attack.

Radar alone cannot accomplish this. We are short 300,000 pairs of loyal American eyes for the Ground Observer Corps.

tonight

This man could almost reach the moon tonight... for he stands at the brink of a new age in the conquest of space, and he knows this:

If we had to, we could get him there. Given time and urgent need, we could design, build and deliver the total solution to that problem.

An entirely new development in the aircraft industry now makes this possible. It is known as Systems Engineering... a science and a method of developing aircraft, guided missiles and electronic systems not as traditional flying vehicles but as fully coordinated solutions to operations problems.

Today, Martin Systems Engineering is already in full operation, tailoring airpower to tomorrow's needs. Most of the story is under wraps, but you should know this:

If our security requirements should demand the equivalent of an "Operations Moon," the principles of Martin Systems Engineering would be essential to the solution of that problem.

You will hear more about Martin!

Airborne Conference Set For Ft. Bragg on 17th

Leading authorities on airborne operations from all of the military services will attend a conference on joint airborne matters from 17 through 20 Nov. at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

The conference is being conducted by the Department of the Army. Maj. Gen. Albert Pierson, Director of the Joint Airborne Troop Board, has been designated as conference coordinator.

Those attending the conference will be acquainted with current and contemplated developments in airborne doctrine, equipment and training. Airborne concepts, doctrine, procedures and equipment will be examined so that a free interchange of opinion may be obtained from all of the services.

Three Day Seminar

Highlight of the meeting will be a three-day seminar on such subjects as airborne division antitank organization, airborne operations in the face of enemy air superiority, personnel and heavy drop systems, and utilization of assault aircraft in joint airborne operations. Technical assistance on troop carrier tactics and techniques will be given by members of the Air Force Transportation Board. A discussion of tactical employment of helicopters will be conducted by Marine Corps members of the board. The British liaison officer on the board will present material on airborne developments, maneuvers and tests by military forces of his country. Standardization and joint Canadian-United States maneuvers will be discussed by the Canadian liaison officer.

On the final day of the conference, a personnel and equipment parachute drop will be presented. A battalion combat team, with supporting weapons, will take part. In addition to C-119's, the new C-124 aircraft of the 18th Troop Carrier Air Force will be used in the operation. The C-124 can carry battle-ready paratroopers, or a 155-mm gun with its prime mover, or an M-24 light tank. After landing, the troops will conduct a tactical assembly and problem under simulated combat conditions.

Follows 1950 Pattern

The conference scheduled to start 17 Nov. follows a pattern established in January 1950 when General J. Lawton Collins, then Army Chief of Staff, appointed an Airborne Panel Board to provide a concept of airborne operations. As a result of the panel's report, the Army Airborne Center was formed at Ft. Bragg. The Center was inactivated in June 1951, and the Joint Airborne Troop Board was then formed by the Army Chief of Staff, by directive from the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Retired Pay Decision

The Comptroller General has ruled as follows (B-116582) as to the retired pay of an enlisted man who held temporary appointments as commissioned warrant officer and as lieutenant (jg):

"A Regular Navy enlisted man who held temporary appointments as commissioned warrant officer and as lieutenant (jg) under the act of July 24, 1941, as amended, and who is placed on the retired list while serving as temporary commissioned warrant officer under Title III of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, is within the scope of section 316 (j) of the 1947 act so as to be entitled to be placed on the retired list in the rank of commissioned warrant officer with retired pay based on the active-duty pay of such rank; however, he may not be advanced on the retired list to the rank of lieutenant (jg) under section 10 (b) (2) of the 1941 act and receive the retired pay of a commissioned warrant officer."

The decision was based on the case of Cleo L. Gee, serving as a commissioned warrant officer (chief ship's clerk) U. S. Navy.

Sergeant Henning first joined the Army when he was inducted in February 1945.
He was discharged from the service in November 1946 and joined the St. Cloud unit of the Minnesota National Guard the following February. In 1949 he enlisted in the Regular Army and was sent

North Koreans.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill

The Coast Guard has published Circular No. 305-53, which promulgates information and procedures regarding post-graduate and specialized instruction available to officers on active duty, both Regular and Reserve.

The circular states "the fact that an officer has not been selected upon previous application should not deter him from submitting a new application for the same or a different curriculum. All eligible officers are encouraged to apply in accordance with provisions of this Circular."

It was noted that the new circular is designed to obtain applications for post-graduate training in fiscal year 1955, which begins next July, and fiscal year 1956.

Retirement Regulation

The Coast Guard has issued Personnel Circular 28-53, which makes changes in rules pertaining to retirement and separation for physical disability.

The circular notes that an officer authorized to convene physical evaluation boards is permitted to order an individual to appear before such a board instead of having the Commandant take such action. Another change authorizes certain commands to convene boards instead of the Secretary of the Treasury and a third change reduces from five to three the number of officers on such boards.

Admiral Gallery also announced that the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit at Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., was awarded the Chief of Naval Air Reserve Training Trophy for 1953 by demonstrating the greatest improvement in annual competitive training. Comdr. Stanley I. Chernack, USNR, is commanding officer of the unit.

Posthumous Navy Honors

Rear Adm. Tom B. Hill, USN, Commandant, Potomac River Naval Command, gave posthumous Navy medals 16 Oct. to families of two naval officers who died during the Korean war.

At ceremonies in his office at the Naval Gun Factory, Admiral Hill presented to Mrs. Warner R. Edsall, wife of the late Captain Edsall, a permanent citation and Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit with Combat V. The posthumous award cited Captain Edsall for meritorious action while commanding the USS Missouri in combat operations off the coast of North Korea. He suffered a heart attack and died aboard the battleship near Sasebo, Japan, on 26 March 1953.

Mrs. Edsall lives at 2895 S. Abington Street, Arlington, Va.

In the second award ceremony, Admiral Hill presented posthumous medals for heroism and meritorious conduct to the children of the late Comdr. Halbert K. Evans, USN.

Accompanied by Mrs. Evans, Karen Virginia Evans 10, and Halbert K. Evans, Jr., 7, received from Admiral Hill citations and Gold Stars in lieu of third and fourth Distinguished Flying Crosses, Gold Stars in lieu of second and third Air Medals and the Bronze Star Medal with Combat V. The medals were awarded for Comdr. Evans' heroic conduct while commanding Attack Squadron 75, flying from the fast aircraft carrier USS Bon Homme Richard in 1952.

As a pilot of attack bombers, Commander Evans led his squadron on raids against Communist supply and transportation routes, power plants and in close air support strikes. He was cited for bombing and destroying, in the face of heavy enemy antiaircraft fire, portions of the large North Korean hydroelectric complex at the Fusen Reservoir. Another citation singled out Commander Evans for leading his squadron on close air support missions materially assisting United States ground forces to maintain front-line positions.

Commander Evans died in a plane crash in North Korea on 5 Dec. 1952.

Mrs. Evans lives at 2878 Buchanan Street, Arlington, Va.

Colonel Mitchell was a member of the board of directors of the Albuquerque Ski Club, and his wife, Barbara Lee, was vice president of the Albuquerque Figure Skating Club. Mrs. Mitchell and their three children will join Colonel Mitchell in London in about three months.

Prior to assignment here, Colonel Schilke was stationed at SAC Headquarters at Omaha.

Army Urges More Colleges To Adopt ROTC Change

Senior colleges following Branch Material courses in the Army ROTC program are being encouraged to convert to the General Military Science curriculum beginning with the 1954-55 school year.

Greater economies would be realized and it would be possible to eliminate over production of officers in some branches and shortages in others, if the General Military Science program is followed, the Army has stated in a letter sent to all major commands.

The letter describes the benefits of the General Military Science curriculum as follows:

Increased Participation

In colleges where the academic pattern is varied, at the present time, many students do not have an interest in the particular specialized ROTC branches available to them. The General Military Science program, if established in such schools, would afford an opportunity for increased student participation in the ROTC.

Participating schools would also benefit, as the Army could make necessary adjustments without imposition of branch quotas, and the only limitations would be those imposed by the budget or higher authority.

Many civilian educators at institutions following the General Military Science program have indicated that the new course is the most acceptable ROTC curriculum developed to date, while the Army considers it to be the most advantageous in meeting its requirements.

Currently, General Military Science is being given in 107 of the 253 Senior college ROTC units. It was originally introduced into 59 institutions at the beginning of the 1952-53 school year. This school year an additional 48 schools have converted to the new course.

Greater Scope

Because of its greater scope, the General Military Science course prepares students for commissioned service in any branch of the Army, and affords broader use of hundreds of ROTC graduates each year. Every effort is made to assign these graduates to the branch of the Army which is most closely aligned with the professional training of the individual, and, insofar as possible, in keeping with the individual's desires.

Prior to the fall of 1952, ROTC instruction at the various colleges was in a specific branch of the Army, such as Artillery, Infantry, Quartermaster Corps, Ordnance Corps, or others. Subsequent active duty assignment normally depended upon existing vacancies in the branch concerned.

Navy Patrol Bomber Crashes Nine of 10 Are Rescued

A Navy P2V Neptune patrol bomber operating from the Naval Air Facility in Iwakuni, Japan, crashed off the coast of the southern tip of central Honshu Island on the morning of 27 Oct. All but one of the 10 crewmen were rescued.

The missing man is the plane's co-pilot, Lt. Comdr. C. R. Essex, Atlanta, Ga.

The pilot of the plane, Lt. Comdr. Charles W. Hollinshead, attempted to reach the aircraft carrier USS Sicily when one engine of his plane failed. After limping 33 miles on one engine the patrol plane ditched within 1,000 yards of the carrier.

The Sicily's helicopter, piloted by Ens. Steve Myer, picked up four of the survivors. The other five crew members who were rescued were picked up from an inflated life raft by the destroyers USS Fletcher and USS Munro.

Col. Knight Joins Airline

At the same time, Sternberg announced the resignation of William H. Meranda, Vice President of Operations, who resigned in order to devote himself to the receivership of U. S. Airlines.

Colonel Knight was from 1937 to 1941 Chief of the Air Transport Section Technical Development Division of the CAA. He was Assistant to the Director of the Safety Bureau of the CAB in 1941. Navy Relief Ball Fills Loft—

The historic Sail Loft of the Naval Gun Factory was jammed with capacity crowds on the occasion of the annual Navy Relief Ball held on 23 and 24 Oct.

High-ranking Naval and Marine Corps officers, headed by Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson, and their ladies attended the ball on Friday evening and a throng of enlisted Navy and Marine Corps personnel from nearby installations, and their guests, were in attendance on Saturday.

Although the President and Mrs. Eisenhower were unable to attend the ball, the First Lady was present on Friday afternoon at a special "dress rehearsal" of the variety show which highlighted each evening's ball. Host and hostess to Mrs. Eisenhower and her party were Rear Adm. Tom B. Hill, Commandant, Potomac River Naval Command, and president of the District of Columbia auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society, and Mrs. Charles S. Thomas, chairman of the executive committee for the ball, and wife of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Supplies and Logistics. Mrs. Eisenhower greeted each member of the officers' and enlisted personnel's committees on arrangements, and later offered her congratulations to members of the cast.

Feature attraction at the annual event was the appearance of Julius LaRosa, one-time member of the Navy Band and former member of the Arthur Godfrey troupe of radio-television fame. The show, "The Fleet's Ashore," produced and directed by Capt. Ernest Frankel, USMC, was built around the theme that LaRosa, playing the part of a sailor, desired to leave the Navy and try his luck in getting into radio and TV as a singer. His father played by Jackson Weaver, popular Washington disc jockey, persisted in advising him that the Navy was the place for a young man.

Music for the two evenings was furnished by the Navy Band, the Navy School of Music and the Marine Band.

Other featured members of the cast included Sonja Dragomanovic and Joseph Edwards, ballet; Johnny Felice, accordion solo; Dotty Paul, soloist; Louis and Tony Columbo and Harry Boorus, male trio; and eleven women Marines, all natives of Hawaii, who performed a hula dance.

"Far Away Places" was the over-all theme for the ball. The Sail Loft was gaily decorated with porthole views of different countries from all over the world, augmented by figures suspended from the ceiling such as a blue-nosed eskimo, a penguin, Neptune, and a dragon. The center-piece in the main Sail Loft was a large world globe, about which revolved a ship with one sailor looking forward, another aft.

Mrs. Thomas, general chairman of the ball, was assisted by Mrs. Murray L. Royer, vice chairman, wife of Rear Admiral Royer, Paymaster General of the Navy; Lt. Kathleen Clardy (SC), USN (W), Secretary; Comdr. Kenneth R. White (SC), USN, treasurer, and Lt. R. N. Sanders, USN, assistant treasurer.

Other committee members were Mrs. I. N. Tripi, wife of Capt. Tripi (SC), USN, advertising and program; Mrs. James C. (Continued on Next Page)

■ FT. BLISS, TEX. Flags and military representatives of 13 nations participated here in a colorful military review commemorating United Nations Day on 24 Oct.

The blue-and-white flag of the United Nations occupied the place of honor in the reviewing line composed of the 12 Allied nations' representatives and colors. The reviewing officer was Brig. Gen. William E. Waters, commander of the 1st Guided Missile Brigade.

In addition to the United States, 11 U.N. member nations and the Republic of Korea were represented in the review. The participating U.N. members were Canada, Chile, China, Denmark, France, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Thailand, United Kingdom and Yugoslavia.

All the participating nations except Mexico currently have officers or enlisted men studying at the post's Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles Branch, The Artillery School, or acting in the capacity of liaison officers.

Six Bliss battalions, marching to the music of the combined 62nd and 65th Army Bands, participated in the review under the command of Col. Daniel O'Connor, commander of the 1st Guided Missile Group.

Because of the absence of enlisted men from some of the foreign delegations, all of the colors were carried by American troops from the post. The 33rd AAA Battalion acted as the color guard battalion.

The ceremonies began with the massed colors marching on to Noel Field in line with the six participating battalions. The Allied colors executed a "front and center," coming to rest behind the reviewing party, with the U.N. flag taking the place of honor with General Waters. Each of the national colors came to rest behind their respective military representatives.

The U.S. colors, returning to the line of troops, continued in the review, climaxed by the U.S. colors, group standards, guidons and troops passing before the Allied colors and representatives.

VALUED PHOTOS

FT. MYER, VA. Three valuable 19th century photographs discovered among the effects of a WW I hero were acquired recently by the Third "Old Guard" Infantry Regiment and will take their place with other memorabilia belonging to the oldest active Regular Army infantry regiment.

The pictures found among the effects of Maj. Gen. Omar Bundy were presented to Third Infantry Commander Col. Dennis M. Moore by the late general's nephews M. P. Bouslog of Mobile, Ala., and Col. Robert B. Ransom, USA-Ret., of Gaithersburg, Md. General Bundy, a former officer of the 3d, commanded the Second Division of the American Expeditionary Forces in France.

One of the shots taken in 1898 depicts the regiment about to embark from Mobile, Ala. for Cuba and the Spanish-American War. Shortly after this photo was taken, the regiment captured the village of El Caney on 1 July 1898. The regiment added further laurels at San Juan Hill and in the siege of Santiago.

Iceland Opened To Dependents, But Strict Controls Will Be Essential Because of Lack of Quarters

A report from Headquarters, Iceland Air Defense Force at Keflavik Airport reveals that this station is being opened to dependents, but on a limited basis because of the lack of quarters and the fact that private rentals are not approved in Iceland and purchase of houses by non-citizens is prohibited by Icelandic law.

It is reported that there are no adequate hotel accommodations available in the vicinity of the airport.

The tour of duty for Air Force personnel assigned to this command is fixed at 12-months; however, those having their dependents join them are required to serve a 24-months tour.

Here are excerpts from a report giving tips to dependents on living conditions in Iceland, as prepared by M/Sgt. Grover C. Jarrett and A/1c Paul Forister at Keflavik:

AUTOMOBILES: The shipment of privately-owned automobiles is authorized for individuals whose dependents have been authorized travel on the approval of the Commander, Iceland Defense Force. Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers will be authorized shipment of vehicles, provided they have one year remaining to serve on their current tour. (Military transportation is available on the airport. The only public transportation operated in Iceland is commercial bus and taxi service—there are no railroads—and the Icelandic Airways.)

WINTER CLOTHING: Complete winter clothing should be a part of the travellers luggage. The winter service uniform is an excellent work uniform, even for the summer months. Civilian clothing is authorized for wear off the airport, visiting in quarters, and at both the Officer's and NCO Clubs. Individuals should bring clothing they would normally expect to use in the vicinity of New York City during the winter months.

BAGGAGE ALLOWANCE: Since transportation to Iceland is via MATS aircraft, the normal allowance for baggage is 65 pounds. Hold baggage may be shipped through commercial transportation or railway express.

The average delay on hold baggage is approximately six weeks.

COMMISSARY: A government operated sales commissary is located at the airport. No food supplies are available locally and no items of food may be taken from the limits of the airport. The hotel restaurant is the only restaurant on the airport.

SCHOOLS: There are no civilian schools available for non-Icelandic speaking students. Correspondence type school material is available and the University of Maryland offers college extension courses with professors from the University assigned as instructors.

RECREATION: Outdoor sports activities are necessarily limited by the climatic conditions of Iceland. Fishing is very popular and trips may be arranged for parties or individuals. Skiing and ice skating are popular in the winter months. Sightseeing tours are sponsored by Special Services and cover many of the interesting spots of the island. A theater, library and recreation hall are located on the airport. The Office of Information Services operates an Armed Forces Radio Service station (T F K), which is on the air with transcriptions of popular programs from the United States eighteen and one-half hours daily.

CURFEW: All military personnel are subject to a very strict curfew.

PETS: The shipment of pets to Iceland is prohibited.

BANKING: Banking facilities are provided by the American Express Company, with military pay certificates and Icelandic Kronur being the only authorized medium of exchange. All United States currency must be exchanged for military pay certificates immediately upon arrival at the airport.

WOMEN'S CLUBS: Since this station is just being opened to dependents, there are no women's clubs in operation. The base has been operated with a view toward military use rather than giving much thought to dependent needs. However, it is expected that upon the arrival of dependents from the United States there will be numerous changes—changes that will give Keflavik Airport a homier atmosphere.

Service Wives Pledge Support For Campaign To Protect Commissaries—Other Fringe Benefits

SERVICE wives and widows from all parts of the nation are continuing their barrage of letters to the Service Wives' Coordinating Committee, which has established its office in the headquarters of the Gold Star Wives' Club at 1906 K Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Recent issues of THE JOURNAL have published numerous letters received by the Committee, whose active leaders include Mrs. Walton H. Walker, widow of the Army general killed in Korea, and Mrs. Bett Shu, wife of an Air Force technical sergeant.

Here are some of the letters received at Committee headquarters, for which publication has been authorized.

Cites Medical Care

In answer to your letter published in the JOURNAL, may I say "Congratulations" for your efforts in organizing the Service wives in an effort to impress upon Congress the seriousness of taking away the "fringe benefits."

I have almost felt panicky reading about it! My husband is making a career of the Army and suddenly it seems that what small security we have had is disappearing. Please tell me what I should do to help. I've talked to some of the wives here at Ft. Sill, but have not been able to do any good.

I am especially interested in trying to hold on to medical care for dependents. My husband is going overseas and I realize how terribly important medical care is.

Thanks again for at least showing a way that might help the wives, widows and children of servicemen.

ALICE C. STEVENS,
1425 Snow Road,
Artillery Village,
Lawton, Okla.

CPO's Wife Pledges Support

My husband is a Chief Petty Officer in the regular Navy, and has served nearly 12 years. His base pay is far below that offered by "outside" firms for comparable duties in his field. Nevertheless, he has chosen the Navy as his career, and while he enlisted at a time when (even our retail merchants said) "Nothing was too good for our boys," he prefers service life.

These same firms who object so strenuously at our Government being able to offer the necessities of life at a saving to the serviceman allow their own employees a discount of from 10 to 20% on purchases, and certainly do not require their employees to go to another store to make their purchases, so that a fellow merchant will derive the profits from these sales.

Now, as you know, profits from exchanges go to further recreational activities at the various bases. If these facilities do not receive these profits, they will have to be eliminated or the taxpayer will have to dig a little deeper. Perhaps the American Retail Federation will donate a portion of their profits for these "unnecessary" activities? Or better still, our younger servicemen can just go to the corner bar for their recreation.

Keep up the fight, and if I can help, don't hesitate to call upon me.

MRS. FRANCES MORGAN,
3105 G Street, S.E.,
Washington 19, D. C.

Time To Fight

I hope that your organization will make a point of keeping us all informed of pending legislation and the proper time for us all to "write to our Congressmen" about matters that concern us. The deluge of mail we could get going might convince them that we have an important vote, if our husbands do not. How about honorary memberships for our parents—their votes are a more stabilized force and each serviceman has a father and mother, father-in-law and mother-in-law concerned for his welfare. Perhaps our voices would be heard if the Congress were made to recognize the fact that each serviceman could command at least six votes on legislation concerning his welfare — his own, his wife's and their parents'!

I sometimes feel we deserve the treatment we get when we aren't willing to fight for ourselves. It's about time we started to fight!

Coast Guard Wives Reaction

We of the Coast Guard Wives' Club of Baltimore wish to go on record as very definitely opposing all and any curtailment of "fringe benefits" now existing for servicemen and their dependents, both at home and overseas.

I think the editorial "Fringe Benefits" in the 3 Oct. issue of the JOURNAL was particularly good and one that could be copied and widely distributed as very much to the point and worthy of thought by everyone.

We shall all be anxiously waiting—and hoping—that the good work being done by your organization (the Gold Star Wives' Club) and those helping and supporting you will bring about the desired results.

Gen. Ogden Reports On "Okinawa Today"

government and a stabilized economy. More than 182,000 Allied troops were stationed in the Ryukyus in 1945, most of them on Okinawa. Now, with recent improvements, the number of troops which could be staged through Okinawa in the event of future necessity should greatly exceed the number stationed on the island during the war.

The arduous task of building a base on Okinawa began immediately following World War II. In 1946 Congress implemented the program with initial appropriations; but recurring typhoon damage and general U.S. demobilization throughout the world retarded the program.

In 1949 when world-wide tension re-emphasized the need for a United States base in the Ryukyus, a gigantic military construction program was inaugurated.

A special engineer commission was sent to Okinawa to study specific problems relating to the program. This commission recommended that reinforced concrete block structures be erected. Construction of this type would not be greatly affected by the elements (typhoons, humid salt-air, and earthquakes), would require relatively small maintenance expenditures, and could be erected from materials available in the Far East.

The master plan for the Okinawa construction is the outline for building a complete military establishment. Water treatment facilities, power plants, highways, shipping berths, electrical distribution facilities, air strips, and recreational buildings, as well as troop and dependent housing are all part of the project.

This tremendous construction program has been carried on by the Okinawa Engineer District in the face of innumerable difficulties. Working against typhoons and intense summer humidity, against equipment shortages brought on by the war in Korea, and against demands created by the proximity of that war, District-trained Ryukyuan laborers are building a formidable defense outpost on the very frontier of Communism.

During the time since construction began, Okinawa military units have continued to function on a 100-per cent operational basis. Amid the normal confusion of such construction, medium bombers made bombing runs against North Korea, jet fighter-bombers patrol areas around the island, and ground troops keep in top fighting trim through rigid training.

Although additional work is required before construction is completed, the dividends of the program are becoming clearly evident. An adequate road network has been completed, port facilities have been improved, airfields have been built, and troops and dependents are housed in typhoon-resistant barracks and homes. The small number of natural recreational facilities have been supplemented by recreation centers.

On the civil side of the ledger, the Ryukyuan people, with the assistance of the United States Civil Administration, have made notable progress. In March 1952, the people of the islands selected their own legislative representatives in the first Ryukyus-wide election. On 1 April 1952, the seventh anniversary of the landing of American troops, the Government of the Ryukyu Islands became a reality.

With the termination of World War II fighting in 1945, Okinawa was little more than a war-devastated wasteland. Its cities and villages had been destroyed, its economy was completely disrupted, and little semblance of pre-war governmental structure remained.

Even before the Ryukyuan government was established, the United States had made remarkable progress in rebuilding the local economy. A currency system was established and a bank organized which now does a $120 million business each year. Trade with the outside world, particularly Japan, had begun.

Today, spurred by U. S. construction and by their own conscientious efforts, the Ryukyuan people have lifted their economy to and in some cases beyond its pre-war level. There is still a small deficit in the Ryukyuan budget, but the amount of U.S. subsidy is diminishing annually.

Although it will never be possible to wave a wand and see a magic transformation, gradual progress will eventually bring the realization of our plans for a sound Ryukyuan economy and an efficient system of government.

Today, under United States control, Okinawa stands as the free world's most important advanced base in the Pacific. A strong and complete military outpost gained in a costly World War II victory, it represents the strength behind United States efforts toward peace and good order in the Far East. In 1953 Okinawa is rightfully being called the "Keystone of the Pacific."

Dean, was captured by the enemy, died 3 Nov. at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C. Funeral services were held yesterday at Ft. Myer, Va., followed by burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Maj. Gen. Church

General Church, 61, held command of the 24th Division until 1951 when he returned to this country and was assigned command of the Infantry Center at Ft. Benning, Ga. Illness forced him to retire. He had been hospitalized at Hot Springs, Ark., and at Walter Reed since May 1952.

When the first American troops were flown from Japan to Korea to halt the advancing North Korean armies, General Church went with them as their commander. Later, when more troops arrived, General Dean was sent from Japan to command them. General Church, then a brigadier general, was appointed assistant to General Dean and liaison with General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, then Far Eastern Supreme Commander.

Later, when General Dean fell into enemy hands, General Church regained command. Driven back to the Pusan perimeter, he commanded his own troops as well as a newly-arrived Marine brigade.

Throughout his Army career, which began in 1917, he was an infantry specialist. He saw combat action in both world wars. In WWII, he was assistant commander of the 45th and 84th Infantry Divisions in Africa and Europe. Postwar assignments included commands of Ft. Monroe, Va.; Ft. McClellan, Ala., and Ft. Jackson, S. C.

General Church is survived by his widow, Mrs. Regina H. Church, who is temporarily making her home with her sister, Mrs. H. P. Hartshorn, at 3910 Dresden Street, Kensington, Md., and daughter, Martha, now residing in Thailand with her husband, Maj. John T. Volentine.

Guided Missile Scientists Decorated by Navy

Three scientists have been awarded the Navy's highest civilian award for their work with guided missiles.

In ceremonies at the Allegheny Ballistics Laboratory, which the Hercules Powder Co. operates for the Navy at Cumberland, Md., Assistant Secretary of the Navy Raymond H. Fogler presented the Distinguished Public Service Award to Ralph F. Preckel, Lyman G. Bonner and Richard Winer. Attending the ceremonies were Rear Adm. W. S. Parsons, deputy chief of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, officials of the company and other distinguished guests.

The award cited the scientists for "developing new propellants which make possible the use of guided missiles and rockets over a much wider range, greatly enhancing the performance and safety of those weapons."

Anti-Influenza Shots

The Army has announced that anti-influenza vaccine will be given troops this year in certain overseas commands.

Troops in Alaska, Europe and the Far East will be inoculated during November, according to Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army Surgeon General. Troops earmarked for overseas replacements between 15 Nov. and 31 Mar. 1954 will be given immunization shots in ports of embarkation prior to sailing.

"Experience during the 1952-1953 respiratory disease season, as in other years," said General Armstrong, "demonstrated that effective use of influenza vaccine results only when it is administered prior to the onset of epidemics."

Col. Edgar Heads VA Div.

The Veterans Administration announced recently that Col. Frank H. Dryden has resigned as Assistant Administrator for Construction to enter private business as a consultant engineer. He will be succeeded by Col. Raleigh M. Edgar, who has been Chief of the Construction Division in Washington, D. C. since 1949.

Colonel Edgar served with the Royal AF during WW I. In the next war, he entered the USA as a major in charge of a battalion, and served in the African and Mediterranean theatres. He returned to this country and served as Deputy Commander of the Sixth Service Command in Chicago, where he was separated from the Service in 1946.

New Developments May Alter Naval Strategy

Three new developments in the field of Naval warfare — atomic propulsion, ship specialization and guided missiles — "may ultimately have far-reaching effects on the composition of navies and their operations," according to the new edition of Jane's Fighting Ships.

The authoritative British publication states that the ultimate effect "must inevitably be to alter many of our present ideas" about the design and construction of fighting ships as well as the strategic and tactical operations of naval fleets.

In the conversion from sails to mechanical power, new forms of motive power and new fuels were constantly adopted to give higher speeds and increased ranges of action, Jane's notes, "but the application of nuclear energy will make sea power more formidable than ever before" by giving A-powered ships the capacity for travelling vast distances without refueling.

Ships Will Pair Off

In the area of ship specialization, the publication predicts warships of the future may be ordered in pairs and operated in pairs (as is now being done with the U. S. hunter-killer teams). "On the principle that a jack-of-all-trades can be a master of none," Jane's states, "ships are being built to play a specific role, and the 'maid-of-all-work' destroyer or sloop type is on its way out."

The application of surface-to-surface guided missiles to sea power also "opens up new horizons," the book notes. "Such missiles, fitted with atomic warheads and capable of finding their targets over ranges of 200 miles or more, could be weapons of great military value whether used for bombardment from positions off an enemy's coast or as long-range missiles in a sea battle, supplementing and possibly eventually replacing attack aircraft."

England Remains #2

Discussing the controversial question of England's place among the world's navies, Jane's declares that "in spite of what has been mis-read into Parliamentary statements or misconstrued in some sections of the press, the Royal Navy is still the second largest navy in the world, second only to that of the United States."

At the same time, however, the book states that the British Navy "is dated" as far as its bigger ships go. In the eight years since the end of WWII, "no battle-ships, no aircraft carriers, no cruisers and no destroyers have been ordered" in Great Britain. Unless more carriers and cruisers are built "at once," Jane's states, by 1960 Britain will have only two modern large fleet carriers and only eight cruisers "under 18 years of age."

In all fairness, however, the book notes that despite the no-building program there has been "an immense programme of conversion, reconstruction and modernization of existing warships."

Russian Navy

Comparing the British and Russian navies, Jane's gives the following figures (Russian ships in parentheses): Carriers 11 (0), Battleships 5 (3), Cruisers 26 (20), Destroyers 107 (83), Frigates 161 (38), Submarines 53 (370).

The 1953-54 Jane's has 17 new illustrations of Russian vessels including a broadside view of the new cruiser Sverdlov (about 800 tons smaller than the U. S. Baltimore class). The cruiser mounts 12 6-inch guns in triple turrets, 12 3-9 inch guns in six twin mountings, and 32 37mm AA guns. Now in seagoing commission, the cruiser also is fitted for minelaying. Jane's reports that six to eight sister ships are reported to be under construction or being completed in the Baltic and one building in the White Sea.

Deliver Last Banshee

The last twin-jet Banshee fighter plane ordered by the Navy from the McDonnell Aircraft Corporation has been delivered.

The plane was accepted by Comdr. C. H. S. Murphy, the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics representative at McDonnell, from the company's president, J. S. McDonnell.

Phantom and Banshee experimental and production contracts during the past 10 years have totaled approximately $340 million. A total of 60 Phantoms and over 800 Banshees of all types have been delivered to Navy and Marine operational units.

Rear Adm. Selden B. Spanglet, Force Maintenance and Materiel Officer, U. S. Atlantic Fleet AF, has stated that "the production of the last Banshee by no means predicts the end of its successful life in the Navy. . . . At the present moment the Banshee is the backbone of the carrier jet aircraft, carrying the major load and not complaining about it."

Expands Engineering Program

Bendix Aviation Corporation has announced a change in its engineering program which will expand operations of the company's Pioneer-Central Division in Davenport.

George A. Lewthwaite, Division general manager, said engineering for an important part of the Bendix output of oxygen systems for pilots and crews of high-altitude aircraft will be concentrated there. The Davenport plant, he pointed out, already is a key producer of oxygen systems but the engineering previously has been centered at an eastern division of the Corporation.

The change in the Bendix engineering set-up will bring approximately 10 engineers to Davenport from the Eclipse-Pioneer Division, Teterboro, N. J., and it creates immediate openings for 10 new graduate engineers at Pioneer-Central.

Completes Airlift Contract

Pan American World Airways has wound up participation in the Pacific airlift after completing a total of 2,604 trips during the past three and a half years.

A total of 114,271 passengers were transported, more than eight million pounds of mail and 23 million pounds of cargo.

At the height of the airlift, 27 planes were in operation. Subcontractors were American Airlines, Capital Airlines, Eastern Air Lines, Pan American-Grace Airways and Western Airlines.

Flying Boxcars At Ardmore

The Air Force's 463 Troop Carrier Wing now is flying routine missions out of its new home base at Ardmore, Okla., following reactivation of the one-time World War II bomber field early this month.

Formerly stationed at Memphis, Tenn., the wing recently moved into the rebuilt Ardmore AFB with 2,000 men and approximately 50 Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcar troop and cargo transports.

Republic Net Income Up

Republic Aviation Corporation reports a net income of $6,105,199 for the first nine months of 1953, after provision for federal income and excess profits taxes of $14,112,442 and New York State franchise taxes of $1,170,000. This net amount compared with $4,190,111 earned during the same period last year, according to Mundy I. Peale, president.

The 1953 earnings for the three quarters are the equivalent of $5.52 per share compared with $4.17 per share during the same period for last year. A 10 per cent stock dividend declared late last year raised the number of outstanding shares to 1,105,946 from the 1952 total of 1,005,406. The company's backlog of unfilled orders remains at approximately $1,000,000,000, Peale said.

Shock Symposium Set

A technical symposium on Shock and Vibration will bring together about 400 scientists and engineers 17 and 18 Nov. at the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, Los Angeles, Calif., according to Donald A. Quarles, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Research and Development).

The symposium, the 21st of a series which began in January 1947, is sponsored by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense to assist the military departments and their contractors who are developing packaging for guided missiles.

The Los Angeles Ordnance District, on behalf of the Department of the Army, will be host for the November sessions. The three military departments act in turn as hosts of the symposia.

Why UNITER is the Officer's BEST Life Insurance Buy...

Created by officers to meet officers' needs, the UNITER is issued only to officers and their families. Because only these preferred risks may buy the UNITER, we can offer specific advantages not available elsewhere.

NO WAR CLAUSES OR GEOGRAPHICAL RESTRICTIONS: You are protected anywhere in the world, in war or peace. (Aviation coverage for rated officers is available.)

UNUSUAL FLEXIBILITY: Ten forms of "ordinary" and investment type life insurance are united in the UNITER. Convert as your needs change—without physical examination, financial loss or decrease in protection.

UNIQUE FEATURE: If you choose a higher premium plan, for retirement or investment, and do not complete it because of death, your policy automatically reverts to lower premium "ordinary life"—and your beneficiary receives not only the face amount of the policy, but the accumulated difference between "ordinary life" premiums and higher premiums.

Through dividends, officer-policyholders share in the profits of this officer-created company. Monthly allotment payments optional at no extra cost.
